

A world without any worry of survival means a world without hunger, pain, career tension, leaving us with numerous possibilities. It could result in a big positive or a negative change.

There could be two major possibilities “PEOPLE WILL START THINKING CREATIVELY” OR “PEOPLE WILL DO NOTHING”

Why and how will people start thinking creatively??

Think it this way, It's a Saturday night you have no plans, cable isn't working and neither your Netflix is subscribed, in short you have nothing to do, but you can't spend whole day sitting on your couch doing nothing, so you would try to do almost everything you ever wished to do without any pressure of anything, and that is how you would try to innovate, similarly if you won't have to worry about survival you would innovate or try new things everyday without any fear of losing or pressure of surviving which would enable us to try all the probability of our ideas, and who knows which innovation bring us closer to enhancing the time period of existence of humanity.

Why would people do nothing and what would it result in??

Now if people don't need to worry about surviving they just might don't do anything for there rest of the life cause they don't have to, it would might be like people don't want to live cause there is nothing to live for, because The real joy or willingness of living is due to the ups and downs of the life which come due to the need of surviving, if they don't have to worry about surviving they won't know the fear of losing or the feeling of failure and without that there won't be the joy of winning or innovation and if there won't be any joy or fear or sadness then there might not be any reason for living.
